RESCUED FROM DRIFTING ICE

10 Rescued From Drifting Ice

LAST OF 56 OFF OF LAKE ERIE

Fishermen and Coast Guards Snatched From Death in Blizzard

Buffalo, N. Y., Feb. 9 (AP)—Ten weary men walked ashore over the ice hummocks of Lake Erie today and wrote the last word in a tale of 50 hours of battling with cold, exposure, hunger and imminent death on the drifting floes of the wind-swept lake.

Three of those men had spent the night on the ice, drifting helplessly at the mercy of the changing wind. Four times they had seen safety almost within their grasp, only to have it snatched away by the elements.

The other seven were coast guards trapped last night by a sudden shift of ice as they sought to rescue the last three men on the drifting ice floes.

The ten were found this morning by airplanes chartered by the coast guard and the Buffalo Evening News, the plane dropped food and coffee to them and flew back to guide rescuing parties.

Fifty-six fishermen in all were sent adrift a huge ice cakes Saturday when a blizzard swept the lake, cracking off miles of ice from the main body of shore ice and whirling them into the open water.

On the other hand, it is true that the railroad, built in good faith, at gigantic expense, faces great hardship. And extension of the canal system and water freights will make conditions worse. The St. Lawrence river, when built, cut deep into the business of the railroad serving the Middle West.

You cannot forbid a man to run his passenger car or truck on public roads, built with his tax money. FIFTY-SIX FISHMEN have been put into public roads and motor vehicles in America.

On the other hand, the country cannot run a railroad at a loss. Real competition with automobiles might be supplied if railroads were to observe some principles of lightness, speed and fuel economy developed by the automobile industry, using nonstop rights of way on steel tracks, at high speed, reducing transportation costs, while increasing profits, offering speed and comfort before the reach of motorists on crowded highways. But railroading, like war, is a settled business, and will not easily be shaken out of its rut.

Some solution of the railroad problem would be to the benefit of foreign competitors. It is excellent news that the federal circuit court of appeals has approved a merger of the Vacuum Oil Co. with Standard Oil of New York, a natural combination, in furtherance of trade here and abroad.

A British-Dutch company, headed by Sir Henri Deterding, one of the world's ablest business geniuses, operates in every corner of the United States, and all over the globe, as one solid, undivided organization. If we permit that, why in Heaven's name forbid American business men to do the same.

While we depend on our present oil system let us support and encourage it. Later, if we feel necessity for it, we can change.

Man Charged With Trying to Kill Wife

Charged with attempting to kill his wife with illuminating gas, Ralph Ryan, 51, of Derby St., Somerville, was arrested today after the timely action of a neighbor saved the couple from death.

Ryan is alleged to have turned on the gas range and to have sat in the kitchen awaiting death, while his wife was in bed in the next room. Both were unconscious when the police battered down the doors and rescued them.

The odor of the gas was noticed by Mrs. Gertrude E. Ryan, who lives upstairs, and she notified the police. A maid led by Sergeant Inspector Daniel M. O'Connell carried husband and wife into the yard and revived them.

Three of the horses burned to death were owned by Mrs. Maria Vanderbilt Church of Newport, R. I., divorced wife of Frederick C. Church, Boston, insurance broker and former Governor of Rhode Island.

Three horses were Retoh, Michael and Chipmunk. Three others, including a woman, were missing and may have perished. Mrs. Church's attendants remained unaccounted for, but most, if not all, of them were thought to have escaped and failed to report their safety.

Fire officials estimated the loss in horses at $300,000. Eighteen California prize animals, valued by their owners at about $200,000, had been shipped from the stables, the show having closed Saturday night.

TELS OF 2 WOMEN WHO AIDED HIS UNFALL

Former Cashier Is Arraigned for Attempted Holdup in Holliston

The swift descent of Frank Wood of Boston, which carried him from a respectable estate as a bank official to a cell in East Cambridge jail today, facing possible life imprisonment for attempted holdup of the Holliston Savings Bank, was marred by numerous love affairs, he told police today.

On a girl he blamed his original downfall, when he was charged as cashier of the Mattapan Savings Bank.

On another woman he blamed his loss of a good public job when he was trying to rise above the errors which had begun to blacken his career.

Coolly and calmly without any apparent intention of boasting he painted himself a Don Juan with an irresistible attraction for women. He declared one of those he named took him into her home to live, while her husband was still at the scene.

Thereafter, he said, followed his career of a Bridgewater storekeeper and his varied career, he said he had been a bookkeeper, a salesman, but it was, he returned to him with the advice to make it more joyful.

GREATER BOSTON HIT IN U. S. JURY FATAL GINGER PROBE

CAMBRIDGE AND SOMERVILLE IN PROBE, TOO

Single Indictment May Cover Racket Case Involving 100 Paralyzed in Worcester

Federal grand jury investigation of the Jamaica ginger racket in Massachusetts, which caused paralysis of 100 or more persons in Worcester county, will be resumed Wednesday, Asst. U. S. Atty. Haven Parker said today.

It was reported at the Federal building that the investigation of the wave of paralysis from "jakes" drinking may include Boston, Cambridge and Somerville, where large sales of Jamaica ginger were made last year.

Acting under orders from U. S. Atty.-Gen. William D. Mitchell, Prosecutor Parker is having all indictments returned in Massachusetts, Maine, Kansas, Ohio and Kentucky against alleged Jamaica ginger "racketeers" prepared for remission to the federal grand jury in Boston, with the object of merging all charges into one true bill, with trial to follow here.

Since the probe started the first of the month, the trail of offenders has led to Maine, New Hampshire and Rhode Island, where Federal agents have been checking, up on cases brought to the notice of Prosecutor Parker.

Hospital cases involving "jakes" drinking in Massachusetts, particularly in Worcester County, have been checked up, and from the facts compiled it is believed startling developments are likely within the next fortnight.

BUTLER CRIMS; U. S. BELIEVED

Washington, Feb. 9 (AP)—A slush of relief went up from official Washington today over the abrupt abandonment of the court-martial of Maj.-Gen. Stanley D. Butler, U. S. Marine Corps, for deserting Premier Mussolini as a hind-and-driver.

It was revealed today that the charges against Gen. Butler, alleged "conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline," and "conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman," were dropped. The matter has been allowed to drop with a letter from Gen. Butler that he regrets having caused "embarrassment to the government," and with a companion letter from Secretary of the Navy Adams commending the general's "indication."

Gen. Butler went back to his post at Quantico today with a wide grin on his face and rebuffed his commandant's "tag of two stars" which was pulled down a week ago when he was placed under military arrest, as the result of the government's official, the Navy Department has furnished Ambassador to Martinico a copy of the correspondence between Adams and Butler relative to calling off the court martial.

LOIS TAYLOR, 3-year-old

Styles Change Fast When Girl's 'Washing' Doesn't Dry

Fashions change fast in Lynn as elsewhere, but none so fast as the style of Lois Taylor, who will tell you, after prompting, that she is three and one-half years old.

Lois was a perfect subject for a juvenile fashion plate—in color—when she left her home at 1 p. m. yesterday to play with chums. Her playmates were looking for her. Lois came home.

Where her hair had been Dutch-clipped, with forehead bangs, she now displayed a boyish, and somewhat eccentric, bob, and her pretty blue ribbon was missing.

Her hair, which was white, dried and vanished and in its place was a long, slip-like, white, etc.

NAVAL BILL CUT $36,000,000

Washington, Feb. 9—Proclaiming a rigid economy policy for the Navy, the House Appropriations Committee today reported the 1932 supply bill for the Navy after cutting it $36,000,000 under that of last year.

The program calls not only for the buying up of vessels and reduced operation of the fleet, but cuts the Navy's enlisted strength from 84,000 to 78,000 men and Marine Corps from 14,000 to 12,000 men.

The bill carries a total of $144,342,852 as compared with $180,342,852 last year. Among eliminations for yard and dock improvements were Navy Yard, Portsmouth, N. H., $10,000; Navy Yard, Boston, $10,000; and Hingham, $40,000 for lightning protection; submarine base, New London, Conn., $25,000 railroad.

The Navy claims its service airplanes are as fast as any in the world, but there is a warrent that England and Italy might take the lead in the near future, the House appropriations committee on the navy supply bill was told by Assistant Secretary of the Navy for Air Insignia.

BAD BOY PLAMES WOMEN FOR DOWNFALL

Former Cashier Pleads Not Guilty in an Attempted Bank Holdup

Lois Bank and an assistant bank examiner.

"While working as cashier in the bank, a girl entered my room and an affair began between us," he said. "As a result we were both discharged and I found it impossible to get any more work as an assistant federal examiner, which I had done on the side."

"Then I went to work auditing the books for a water works plant on Marlborough street and from there to chairman, where I was superintendent of the water works for more than a year."

"But a married woman came into my life and I could not detach myself from her, and after awhile her husband left and we went on living together, she as my housekeeper. That wasn't so bad until I lost my job and had to scrounge around for some work."

GOT ANOTHER JOB

"I got a job as inspector for the Metropolitan water works system around Framingham and lived there for a year or so. It was at this time that I became acquainted with the Boston doctor, and we planned to open a tea room on a bicycle apart, but couldn't get a license, so that fell through, and there I was out of a job again in spite of my efforts to make good."

"I went to work for a dress concern and my job was to go out and get women and girls to act as sales people among the neighbors. I was paid $10 a week and I didn't get much, but it didn't pay out very well and went up in smoke after about three months."

PLANNED HOLDUP

"I began to force checks and was found guilty in Quincy and put on probation after I promised to make restitution."

"A week ago Saturday I went to Holliston, in the savings bank, to try to cash a check, but the place was closed. So I decided to get even with a stockbroker down in Bridgewater who tried to have me arrested once for passing a rubber check."

"I got Kunka to go along with me, but the thing flaked when he got cold feet right on the scene. Then I planned the Holliston bank holdup."

Wood, who is 42, spectored and partly built, declared he did not have a gun in the Holliston attempt, but said a cigarette case as a pseudo revolver. Kunka's confession, however, was different, and search is still on for the gun in the woods where the pair were trapped.

SHATTUCK FOR ELY PLAN WITH 'SHORT' NOTES

Declaring that in times of business depression the State ought to go forward with at least a "moderate" program of public works, Henry L. Shattuck today approved the principle of Governor Ely's $20,000,000 plan but quarreled with the details of financial aid.

Shattuck appeared before the House Ways and Means Committee, in which position he was the reputation of being especially filled in State finance.

His appearance was a distinct disappointment to those of his audience who expected he might inaugurate a barrage of attack upon the Governor's vast program.

PRaise for Governor
Shattuck commended the detail and thought with which the Governor had set forth the program by itemizing the expenditures for public buildings, hospitals and parks. He asserted, however, that a bond issue would depart from the pay-as-you-go policy, might lead to waste and carelessness in the future and that the Governor's program ought to be financed by short-term notes, ranging from one to five years.

The $20,000,000 for a public works building, he suggested should be financed through five-year serial notes payable $200,000 each. Instead of by a 10-year bond issue.

WOULD INCREASE TAXES
Shattuck favored a state tax of 10,000,000, as against the $10,000,000 now levied by the Governor. The Governor is already on record as opposed to any such tax increase.

Shattuck strongly urged increasing the gasoline tax from two to three cents.

On that part of the proposed $20,000,000 bond issue which calls for $5,000,000 for public buildings, exclusive of the public works building, with an additional appropriation of $900,000 out of current revenue, Shattuck said:

"You are told that this will take care of the building program for this year, for the year 1932 and for half of 1933."

"This total program of $9,000,000 to cover the needs of two and a half years would require an expenditure at the rate of $3,600,000 a year. This is not far from normal and compares with an average program of $4,131,000 the last three years of $4,131,000."

"If you undertake the entire two-and-a-half-year program this year, you will reduce the 1933 budget of a normal expense of $3,700,000 and the 1934 budget of a normal expense of $3,800,000."

DEPRESSION NEAR END
"If, therefore, you approve the program, I believe it will result in the normal bills of the year as we go along you may have $3,700,000 on one-year notes and $1,800,000 on two-year notes, a total of $5,500,000."

"The remaining $3,500,000, representing about the normal expenditure of one year, it would appear to be should come from current funds unless you are prepared both in this year and the years which follow to shoulder the pay-as-you-go policy."

The depression, which has lasted some 15 months, Shattuck argued, according to "historical precedent" is not much longer to run.

He declared that the expansion may do much to weaken credit and retard sound recovery.

ANTONIO ALBIANI Treasurer DOMINIC ALBIANI President PETER ALBIANI Steward

Albiani Lunch Company, Inc., is celebrating its 21st birthday today. Starting with a small restaurant which was opened at 130 Bedford St., the Albiani Restaurants have been gradually expanding until the present chain includes nine restaurants in Boston.

Dominic Albani is president; Antonio Albani, treasurer, and Peter Albani, steward. Back in 1910, the father business was rather slow with the 18-cent shave and the 25-cent haircut, and Antonio Albani decided to quit the restaurant business.

"I had an idea that a restaurant in Boston could eventually prove very popular."

At that time there were many of the so-called "one-arm lunch rooms" in Boston, featuring light lunches and sandwiches. So the Albiani restaurant broke forth with the announcement that more substantial food would be served and featured spaghetti, meat cakes and minestrone.

As business picked up, the firm prospered and it was decided to extend the Bedford St. store. A store was leased on Summer St. and an entrance was broken through to the Bedford St. restaurant.

Still featuring spaghetti, meat cakes and minestrone, the business at Bedford and Summer St. grew to such an extent that it was decided to open another restaurant in the downtown district. A location was secured at Federal St. and a restaurant was operated there until the block was demolished to make room for the new First National Bank.

Other restaurants were opened at Federal St., 150 High St., 173 Washington St., 632 Washington St., School St., 701 Washington St. and 10 Seely St.

With the establishment of modern units it became necessary to establish a bakery and a commissary. These are located at 101 Albany St. The general offices of the company are also located at this address. The three Albiani brothers are very active daily in the business affairs of the company and have built up an excellent reputation for the fine quality of the foods served, and it has always been the policy of the company to serve food at moderate cost.

MAYOR RUSSELL DEMANDS TREASURER LEHAN PAY CITY $2500

NEW MAN IS PICKED FOR OFFICE

Cambridge Council Not Likely to Accept the Choice of Chief Executive

Demand that he reimburse the city treasury in the sum of $2500 was made of City Treasurer Henry F. Lehan of Cambridge today by Mayor Russell. The demand was a result of the $21,075 deficit in Cambridge city income, revealed through a Boston audit.

Mayor Russell made the demand in a letter to Treasurer Lehan, after indicating that the city audit board, civil action to recover $22,000 lost by the city in the collapse of the Tremont Trust Company.

A successor of Treasurer Lehan was selected today by Mayor Russell, as another result of the audit but indications were that the council will be turned down tomorrow night by the City Council on what is expected to be the latest vote.

Although saying he has picked a successor for the city treasurer, Mayor Russell would not reveal the name and members of the council—which was recessed today on attitude toward the mayor's attempt to oust Lehan—said they did not know the name.

The City Council cannot disapprove that resignation of the treasurer named by the mayor, the council will reject the nomination at the meeting tomorrow night.

At this point, it will be the seventh time the mayor has failed to have Lehan moved from office.

Mayor Russell, in addition, now has a bill in the Legislature to empower the mayor of Cambridge to make appointments to major offices without approval of the council.

This bill is interpreted as being aimed directly at Lehan, and it will be given a committee hearing at the State House on Thursday.

At the city council meeting tomorrow night, two police sergeants and six patrolmen will be detailed in the council chamber to block any other than verbal warfare.

It is understood that Mayor Russell has contradicted the report of the audit division of accounts at the city treasurer's office.

The report charged Lehan with keeping in a dozen different city departments, but said he was "very" "that," "careless," "unbusinesslike" and "chaotic" conditions existed in the treasurer's office.

Ex-Mayor Edward W. Quinn of Cambridge, when asked to give an opinion on the audit report, said he had gone back through the administration, refused to comment.

DRINK ARRESTS HAVE DOUBLED

Citing figures and statistics from very available source, the report of the Moderation League of America, issued today, reveals that arrests for drunkenness throughout the country have practically doubled and arrests of minors have in recent alarming increase.

The league, a temperance, anti-prohibition organization, has been conducting a slaver survey of conditions throughout the nation after prohibition. According to the report, all figures prove that in the present time the entire country is more than 2 to 1 against the recent law.

The survey shows that in 389 cities where figures back in 1914 are available, there were 54,725 arrests for drunkenness in 1935. In some places the total number arrests in 1935 was 23,544 and in 1934, the total was 52,700.

It was pointed out that this increase was not paid in 1935 for 63 places. A further analysis of 125 places, with figures available in 1934, shows that there was a gradual and continued rise in the number of arrests and no indications of abatement.

The most distressing result of the law, however, is the increase in drinking among boys and girls and among people generally the report states.

Free 'Fireworks' Show Every Monday in South Boston

By way of starting the working week in an entertaining way, police who motor to Boston from South by way of Old Colony boulevard, are being treated every Monday morning with a free spectacle on a dump beside the Mile Rd., leading to the city pumping station.

All through the work workers on the dump assemble papers, boxes and other inflammable material in one spot, usually around the remains of a discarded automobile, and set the pile afire Monday morning.

The resulting bonfire with its blazing flames and high column of smoke is a weekly Fourth of July spectacle.

And occasionally there has been some gasoline left in the tank of the old car, and an explosion results, throwing flaming brands high into the air.

Each Monday morning a long line of parked cars stretches along Old Colony boulevard, with the occupants watching the spectacle.

LEADERS SET FRESH HIGHS IN WALL ST.

New York, Feb. 9.—With bears in hasty retreat, the New York Stock Exchange list today recorded one of the broadest advances of the New Year.

The stock market closed at a new high level for 1931, achieved in the most active trading session of the new year. Transactions embraced about 4,000,000 shares.

Leadership was taken by important stocks. In contrast to last week's concentration of dullness in secondary issues, and such shares as General Motors, U. S. Steel, American Can, American Telephone, North American, Union Pacific, Atchafalpa and Westinghouse Electric gained 2 to 3 points.

Allyl Chemical, Hartman and Case were up 3 to 3, and such volatile issues as Auburn and Industrial Rayon shot up 12 to 13.

The oil bre is out of their protracted sluggishness with gains of a point or so in Standards of New York, New Jersey and California, reflecting the favorable decision in the Socony-Vacuum merger case.

tion, while domestically, rains in the middle west, though still inadequate, have tended to quiet the nervousness over the growing lack of water.

CONTROL OF MARKET

The fact that the market seemed to be governed largely by internal conditions, however, led to a conservative attitude.

Most of the commonly used indices of business activity, as corrected for normal seasonal variation, show little change from the on, show little change from December, and it is felt that faster improvement in business will be needed to back up any sustained advance in share prices.

The abundance of credit has attracted considerable investment money into dividend paying stocks, where current rates are regarded as safe, or current prices already allow for expected reductions.

A tabulation shows 116 dividend reductions in January, against 547 in the 12 months of 1930, and only 23 for the full year 1929.

Convincing improvement in business, bankers say, would tend to check the tendency toward dividend reductions by influencing some firms to continue to make payments from surplus until por-

Peril in Debt Cutting

Too Zealous Efforts May Bring Havoc

The gross debt of the United States on August 31, 1919, was $26,596,701,648. At the end of the fiscal year of 1930, it was $16,185,308,279. The reduction within a period of a little more than 10 years was over $10,000,000,000.

Is it necessary that this killing pace should be maintained? Mr. Melvin A. Traylor, the president of the great First National Bank of Chicago, in an interesting address delivered recently, voiced the opinion which is widely shared throughout the country, that the rapid amortization or payment of the war debt is without any DIRECT benefit to the country; and under the present conditions of depression and trade difficulty, it RETARDS business recovery, and IMPOSES AN UNNECESSARY BURDEN UPON A SORELY TAXED AND STRUGGLING PEOPLE.

"I have never believed," said Mr. Traylor, "that the theory was sound that this generation should pay the entire burden of our participation in the war."

"There is much to be said in favor of the argument that while we are prosperous we should pay heavily. But it seems to me now, when we are no longer in that state, we should provide for a slower amortization of our debt, with a consequent lifting of the burden of taxation. In my opinion, this alone will contribute more to a restoration of business activity and cheerful confidence than any other single step which could be taken."

It was Alexander Hamilton who saw in the existence of a national debt a source of positive strength to the government. He maintained that the obligations of the government were a substitute for money, and that their existence would promote, instead of discourage, the great interests of industry.

Of course, the ability to meet the interest upon the public debt and to refund the principal, as it matures, lies at the foundation of the nation's credit. But the maintenance of the national credit does NOT demand a hot-foot reduction in the principal of the debt, when the result is a tax-enfeebled business structure, with curtailed activities and intensified energy and initiative.

Such results tend directly to the impairment of the nation's credit and more than offset the doubtful benefits of a forced and punishing reduction in the principal of the public debt.

Is it possible that Mr. Mellon is attempting to achieve the spectacular in extinguishing the national debt with a rapidity that takes one's breath away?

Is it possible that the rising demand for the relief of distress among our war veterans is to be discouraged by a self-imposed embarrassment of the Treasury, due to a ruinous and feverish pressure for the paying off of the public debt?

The reduction of the national debt is a good thing, provided it is done temperately and with intelligent moderation, and without straining unduly the commercial stability of the country.

Pursued, however, too zealously and with disregard of its indirect havoc, it may become not only a mistake of policy, but a NATIONAL DISASTER.

This Underpass Needed

Mr. Romney Spring's petition for construction of underpasses at the junction of Cambridge and Charles Streets will doubtless receive the approval of the Legislature because it is entitled to approval.

A new army of pedestrian traffic is to be unloaded at the junction of these streets by the establishment of the new station of the Cambridge trolley.

It is already a dangerous, congested center of automobile traffic, as it is a principal artery between Boston and Cambridge, an outlet and inlet to the Northern artery and a direct contact for the pleasure traffic to the banks of the Charles River.

Who will constitute this new army of pedestrian traffic? Dr. Washburn says that 10,000 persons daily will cross this danger point to visit the Massachusetts General Hospital and the Massachusetts Eye and Ear Infirmary.

They will be largely the lame, the halt and the blind, the persons who unfortunately are afflicted by ailments and illnesses which increase their likelihood of danger and who should be our utmost concern.

The underpasses will take them out of the path of danger. An escalator system in the underpasses would supply them with an additional convenience which a considerate city ought to afford.

Our Banks Progress

An occasional defalcation by a dishonest employee is not the criterion upon which to judge our banking system.

We hear about scandals occasionally, but little about the sound banking that is the everyday habit of our institutions.

Few of us hear, for example, that the New Hampshire Savings Bank of Concord sold its New York City bank stocks for $2,313,555 in excess of their purchase price and passed on the profit in a special dividend to the shareholders.

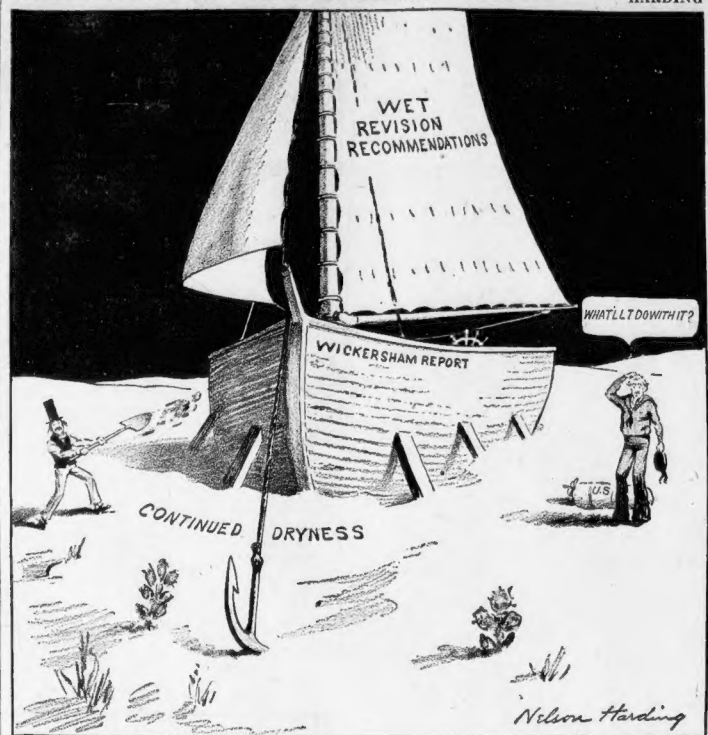

Being a special dividend, it remained an unexploited, unadvertised one.

In so-called bad times, as well as good, our Massachusetts banks have gone along with steady progress. Their assets and deposits today exceed any period in their entire history.

We have a sound basis from which to stride forth to general prosperity. Let's go.

Listen, World! -- Charity

By ELSIE ROBINSON
You Can't Help People

YOU CAN'T help people. You can't mould their lives for them.

And why should you expect to? Even a turnip has a right to do its own growing.

Why shouldn't a human be allowed to do the same? Yes, I admit, some of them go at it all wrong.

They're dumb, silly, extravagant, infinitely exasperating.

But that's their business, not yours. Their business is their business.

The most important business they have—

The business of learning how to live.

And no one can conduct that business for them.

You may want to—you may think you can.

You may insist upon trying to direct their lives.

And they may seem willing—But even if they are willing, it can't be done.

Sooner or later they will slip—Slip into their own scheme of things—

Because that is really the only scheme of things for which they are fit.

That's as far as they have developed.

And it's quite useless for you to try and yank them up—

Until they're ready to go of their own accord.

But look what a mess they make of life.

And how much needless trouble. They cause themselves and others!

Indeed, we often learn far more from our mistakes.

And the right to make a fool of yourself.

Is actually just as sacred As the right to make a saint of yourself.

Of course, we can't let people run hog wild.

Or be smashed for lack of a helping hand.

And it's all right to give that helping hand.

You can do it in the right way. If you'll undertake charity.

Not expecting any particular returns.

Just doing the thing for the love of it.

Then it's all right to help people to help themselves.

But if you only want to meddle and mould

The other fellow over, after your pattern.

And if you expect him to go around drooling with gratitude because you've done so—

Then hands off. For then you'll only grab yourself off a lot of grief.

But you'll deserve it.

Your brand on another's soul than you have to put it on his flesh.

And that's something that even the dumbest soul dictates to realize.

Why aren't people grateful? Why does the "dog" so often bite the hand that feeds him?

That's why—Because the feeding hand Usually demands a quit claim deed on the pup's life.

In return for the chew.

Real Men Like Oak Trees

They Last, While Others With

LOYD GEORGE, WHO SAVED THE BRITISH EMPIRE, ON HIS 68TH BIRTHDAY

Plants, like men, differ. The cabbage is old in a few weeks. An oak tree at that age has hardly started.

The average man at twenty knows about as much as he ever will know and deteriorates mentally and physically from that time until he leaves this world for some other.

A real man, either of the two that you see here, for instance, improves with age, as does the oak tree. These pictures are a rebuke to many Americans that talk about being old at fifty or sixty. At fifty a man's best years should begin—at sixty the best fifty years should be ahead of him.

After carrying the load of the war on his shoulders from start to finish, first supplying money, then ammunition, then the policy that won, Lloyd George, photographed here on his sixty-eighth birthday, is as full of energy, optimism and courage as he ever was.

And old Von Hindenburg, after fighting in the war with glorious courage and sacrifice for his Fatherland, now directs Germany as President of the German Republic, in place of the exiled German Kaiser.

AND VON HINDENBURG IS 84 YEARS OLD.

For the brain there is no "age" limitation. Goethe wrote the second part of "Faust" when he was seventy-two.

The greatest men in the big war were old men; Clemenceau, died far past eighty. He and Lloyd George won the war, defeating the young Kaiser and his young officers.

It isn't how old you are, but how old you permit yourself to FEEL that counts.

These two pictures prove it to you.

The picture of Von Hindenburg was taken as he reviewed the German troops, celebrating the anniversary of the proclamation of the German Empire.

That Empire as you know was proclaimed after the War of 1870 with France, in the Palace of Versailles, the same place in which a little more than fifty years later, the defeat of Germany and the restoration of Alsace and Lorraine, and other provisions of the peace treaty, many of them dangerously naive and impossible, were proclaimed.

A few years make a great difference in the history of nations.
